TAKES COXEY FOR A TEXT.

Rev. Mr. Byers compares Saul's Army to Coxe's.

Rev. W. L. Byers of the North Congregational church, seems to have become interested in the Coxe fever. He has been preaching a series of sermons on "David and His Times," and his sermon yesterday morning was directed to a discussion of the ancient commonwealth army and the present Coxe one.

He contrasted the unrest of the present and the unrest of Israel in Saul's time, and then likened the straggling army of David to Coxe's army. He found both likeness and differences between them. Being discontented, in distress, and longing for better times they were like the Coxe crowd. Having loyal patriotism for country, being willing to work at whatever came to them, and being faithful to their leaders, they were somewhat unlike the Coxe army.

They came to David drawn by the twofold cord of common suffering, and faith in his leadership. They fought for nothing for themselves and their only object seemed to be the perpetuity and happiness of the nation.

In closing, the pastor said: "What we need in these times of unrest and disquiet is to hear the voice of the Son of Man saying, 'Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest.' When the teachings of Jesus are lived in the heart, when the armies of the discontented and burdened rally to him, when wealth and poverty alike hear the voice of the Nazarene no army of the commonwealth will need to march in discontent on Washington and no shallow leaders will gain notoriety by leading men to what they know not."

TAKEN TO LANSING.

Deputy United States Marshal Leon DeBost left for the state penitentiary at Lansing, taking with him the half dozen federal prisoners who were confined in the county jail, and who were sentenced by Judge River.

Among those who accompanied officer DeBost were Words the counterfeiter; Bennett the "matrimonial agency man" who used the mails to defraud; Sheriff's embezzler, and Ross Jones the defaulting postmaster.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 23.—In deciding the complaint of A. W. Wishard to set aside the legislative apportionment in Indiana of 1893, Judge Brown today sustained the demurrer of the state, holding that it was not within the jurisdiction of the court to review the action of the legislature.

LOTS OF LAND.

The Government Has a Large Amount Undisposed Of,

But the Fertile Soil is About Exhausted.

NEED OF IRRIGATION.

How it is Proposed to Dispose of Land.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—[Special.]—The committee on public lands and on Indian affairs are pretty much of one mind as to the measure introduced by Mr. McRae, and when perfected by some amendments the general opinion is that it will speedily become a law. The impression has been for some time that there was very little good land remaining to which this measure could apply, but the figures in the Indian committee's bills and reports show a surprisingly large area which may soon be obtained, and according to Mr. McRae there is much more in abandoned military reservations and prospective forfeitures of railway grants. Everybody has read with much interest of the great rushes made into the recently opened lands in Oklahoma, South Dakota, and elsewhere, the result of which was that the most vigorous, sometimes the most desperate and lawless, held the lands. The McRae bill would put an end to all this. It provides for selling the land to the highest bidder, but each purchaser must be a bona fide settler and obtain only the tract allowed for pre-emption or homestead. In short, he would only buy the exclusive right to take as a settler.

Many Small Areas.
Several tracts are now pending and several bills are introduced to give effect to other treaties which will in no long time open considerable land, but several of the tracts are so remote and secluded and also so small in area that they will only be available to intending settlers already in the vicinity. Among these is the land of the Yakimas in the state of Washington, part of which is said to be very good. Another treaty provides for cession of the land of the Yumas in California, but that is chiefly in a region where water is more valuable than land, as the latter is only useful where there is plenty of the former. The Chippewa reservation in Minnesota is of the same general character as other north Minnesota land, and irrigation is not needed there.

By one general treaty now pending the Comanches, Kiowas and Apaches are given up a tract of tolerably good land in the Indian Territory. The large area which the Yankton Sioux of South Dakota are asked to surrender is of a varied character, and the testimony as to its fertility is quite conflicting. In all probability it is like most of the land on the dividing line between the dry plains and the region of abundant moisture, where, as Jerry Simpson puts it, "there is just rain enough to make a fellow hang on and hope and just drought enough to keep him dog poor till he learns how to farm in such a country." The Round Valley reservation in California comprise some good valley land, with much of the bordering hills and some rocky points. The land to be obtained from the White Mountain, Anchores in Arizona is like the upper Colorado—that is, it can only be made available by a large body of settlers acting together in providing a water supply. Otherwise it would be available only for pasture.

The Kickapoos have some fairly good land both in Arizona and the Indian Territory. This tribe has been noted from an early period in our history as incurably hostile. Within a hundred years they have alternately fought and fallen back before the whites from the Washach to the upper Arkansas, and when a bare majority of the tribe voted a few years ago to submit and take United States protection the rest declared eternal enmity to the white man and scattered in all directions, and there are today Kickapoos in the Kickapoo blood in British Columbia and the Mexican state of Chihuahua as well as in almost every tribe between.

Progressive Red Men.

As seen on the map and as shown in the figures, there seems to be an enormous area of available land, but the best informed witnesses before the Indian committee do not think the total tillable can exceed 5,000,000 acres, and it is probably less than that. As there must be at least half a million men who want to go west, the land and grow up with the country it is easy to see the reasons for Mr. McRae's bill to prevent a rush. Mention of the proposed treaty with the Nez Percés of Idaho revives a languid interest in this progressive but unfortunate race of Indians. They rank with the Cheyennes, Navajos, and Crees of Manitoba and some others as having an original civilization or at any rate an inherent tendency toward progress. The earliest expeditions to beyond the Rocky mountains found the Nez Percés superior to other Indians, and when the Mormons first extended their settlements northward from Great Salt Lake they were met by parties of that tribe and found them the shrewdest traders in horseflesh in the country as well as very skillful breeders. The report of Chief Joseph is still fresh in the public mind, and he is fully recognized as one of the few truly noble red men.

Nearing the Crucial Period.

There is in Oregon a collection of remnants of tribes, known as the affiliated bands, who propose to cede some land, and that part of the Wichita reservation in the Indian Territory which is to be ceded is described as very fine. The military reservation at Durango, Colo., is of the same general character as the Utah and Arizona land above described, and men of office military reservations soon to be made available. In the Fifty-second congress a bill passed the house for reclaiming some 50,000,000 acres of the land granted to railroad companies, but it failed of action in the senate.

Let any reader should be deceived by the figures, it must be added that the most valuable lands have long since passed to private parties, and nearly all that remain consist of mountain and desert, salt, soda and alkali beds. In short, the figures, examination of the maps and of the figures before the two committees shows that we are rapidly nearing, if we have not already reached, that period which our English friends have so long pointed out as the time when our popular institutions will have their severest trials. It is freely admitted that of all the forces modifying American character and insuring the smooth working of our social system none has been so potent as the free fields open in the west as a refuge for the unfortunate, the ambitious and the discontented. All the authorities agree that the land in that field is about exhausted unless the government adopts the grand irrigation scheme proposed by Major Powell, and many western congressmen prophesy that popular pressure will force the adoption of that scheme within 10 years.

CALLS IT A GANG.

The Breach Between Willits and the Populist Administration.

John F. Willits, the first Populist candidate for governor, today exposed the condition of affairs in his party. He says the machine has got control of the state alliance and is using all its power to defeat the wishes of the common people in the party who are true reformers.

Mr. Willits was in Topeka a few hours today and left this afternoon for a tour of the state of Iowa. To a STATE JOURNAL reporter he said: "The machine is determined to grind down every man who opens his mouth, and the machine seems to be getting a pretty tight grip on a certain element of the People's party, but the machine won't always work."

"At the last meeting of the state alliance I was authorized to make a tour of the state for the purpose of working up the interests of the order and organized the aid degree of the alliance. I did not ask for the place, but it was given me, and I was to be paid $2 a day and be allowed my expenses. I started as a member of the alliance, and did some effective work for the order."

"One day when I was at McPherson I received a letter from Governor Leavelle asking for my resignation from the state board of pardons. I sent him the resignation as requested by return mail. He notified the alliance people that I would now be able to put in my entire time organizing the alliance."

"It was however not very long afterwards, about two weeks ago now, that I received a letter from President Hamlin of the state alliance, in which he informed me that owing to the depleted condition of the state alliance treasury he would be compelled to inform me that my services as organizer and lecturer would have to be dispensed with."

"I was in face of the fact that I had been wonderfully successful in building up the alliance, and had taken in over 600 members who will turn into the state treasury $1 each in addition to the ten cents per capita tax which goes to the national alliance and the machine have a firm grasp on the throat of the state alliance and are determined to grind down every individual who fights them."

"I continued the work of organizing, two weeks after they notified me that my pay was shut off, and I am only now leaving the state to fill an engagement made several months ago to speak in Iowa. I will make a tour of the state of Iowa and then I will come back and fight this outfit."

IN A RED BOAT.

Sheriff Burdge and Deputy Wilkerson Chase the St. Marys Robbers.

Sheriff Burdge and Deputy Wilkerson Tom Wilkerson had an exciting chase Sunday afternoon for the three men who robbed the St. Marys postoffice last Friday night and secured $1,100. About 8 o'clock a telegram was received from St. Marys saying "Look out for three men on horse back, going down the Kaw river." The telegram gave descriptions of the men and said they were the postoffice robbers. This telegram was received by Chief of Police Lindsey and was turned over to the sheriff.

Sheriff Burdge made some hasty inquiries and learned that Sheriff Fensky that the men had gone past the Kansas avenue bridge before dinner. The officers took the Union Pacific train to Lawrence. Nobody there had seen the men or the red boat in question, but Sheriff Hindman promised to watch the dam for the next few days. The officers accompanied Burdge and Wilkerson back to Leocompton on a hand-car. The man who runs the ferry there had not seen them, but promised to notify the sheriff if he saw them. Nothing has been heard from the three men in the red boat yet, but it is improbable that they can ever get past Lawrence.

CITY COUNCIL'S WORK.

Much of It Will Be Mapped Out at Tonight's Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the city council tonight at 8 o'clock, under a call issued by Mayor Harrison today which sets forth the following purposes:

To open bids and let contracts; to consider bonds, petitions, communications, ordinances, resolutions, reports of city officers and reports of committees. On the subject of bids and contracts, the bid of C. J. Rosen for the completion of the sewer in district No. 16, the only matter to be dispensed of. Under the head of communications Mayor Harrison will announce the list of committees for the ensuing year. It is believed that Mr. Fellows will remain at the head of the ways and means committee. Mr. Holman will be retained in charge of the committee on claims and accounts; and Mr. Fulton or Col. Burgess will go to the head of the streets and walks committee.

The report of the city treasurer, which has been printed heretofore, and the quarterly report of City Clerk McFadden, are the only reports to be considered. The annual report of Mr. McFadden will not be ready until the next regular meeting.

It is believed that the call for tonight's meeting was made broad and general enough to include any minor miscellaneous business that may come up. The city dump ordinance may be considered, and Col. Burgess has some alleys he would like to have opened.

NEWS OF KANSAS.

OTHER STATE NEWS.

List of Delegates to Republican State Convention.

INDEPENDENCE, April 23.—The Reporter gives the following account of a terrible accident that happened the family of Frank Trout, who lives about four miles from here.

Mr. Trout was away from the house and Mrs. Trout was busy in the garden when she was horrified to see her two little girls, aged about 8 and 10 years, rush screaming from the house with their clothing in flames. She hurried to them and tore the burning garments from them as quickly as possible, but it is feared, not soon enough to save their lives.

Both children are frightfully burned, especially about the stomach and thighs, and it is very doubtful whether either will live. The children were in a room by themselves where there was a fireplace. The clothing of the younger child in some way caught fire, though the children say they were not near the fire at the time. The elder child made a heroic attempt to save her little sister and her own clothing was soon ablaze. Mrs. Trout's hands were considerably burned, but her injuries are not serious.

It is 140x130 feet, five stories high, heated by steam, provided with elevator, water service throughout, and belonged to the Sedgwick Investment company, the owners of which are George L. Rouse and G. H. Blackwelder. Mr. J. T. McCasland of St. Louis is the purchaser, and the price paid is understood to be $175,000.

JOE SMITH CASE.

The Defendants' Attorneys Try to Throw Him Out of Court.

EMPORIA, April 23.—The First National bank, W. A. Randolph, Waldo Worster, et al., who were sued for $50,000 damages by Joe Smith, have answered through their attorneys L. B. & J. M. Kellogg and E. H. Brown.

The answer asks that the case be dismissed because Smith failed to give bond for cost and also failed to file a poverty affidavit.

Smith did make affidavit that by reason of his poverty he could not pay costs, but he swore to the fact last October and did not file his suit until March. Accordingly the attorneys for the defense think he might not be a pauper now.

On account of Judge Randolph being a party to the action, the case will probably be sent to Chase county for Judge Earle to try.

Kansas State S. S. Convention.

WICHITA, April 23.—The annual state Sunday school convention will be held in Wichita this year, and great preparations are all ready being made. ### MAY COME TO TOPEKA.

Salina May Be Supplanted As the Place for Populist State Convention.

The sentiment of the members of the Populist state central committee in session here today is somewhat divided as to the place of holding the state convention. Salina has heretofore been the only candidate
